Identification of a novel 4.5-kb K12-related gene from mouse. A novel 4.5-kb K12-related gene, called mK3, has been identified from a 129 S1 mouse genomic library. DNA sequence analysis revealed that the mK3 gene consists of three exons with a coding region of approximately 600 bp. The mK3 mRNA is detectable in the testis and the ovary at 1 month of age, but not in the brain, kidney, lung, liver, spleen, stomach, intestine, heart, and muscle. The mK3 cDNA was 1,413 bp long, encoding a protein of 413 amino acids with a calculated M(r) of 44,305. The deduced mK3 protein contains a hydrophobic N-terminal domain and a short proline-rich domain. There are two striking features of mK3: (i) this novel gene lacks a known sequence motif and (ii) the sequence alignment with K12 shows a high similarity. This novel gene might be a K12-related gene, and therefore could play a role in spermatogenesis and oogenesis. 2d92ce491b
